

I can't believe that we would even be entertaining this idea. I feel that I have spoken and requested to be on a no call list for a reason. I also have business with a couple banking and lending institutions. One of these institutions never tries to solicit other business from me. The others send credit card applications and other "product" informations repeatedly for things that I do not need or want. I have broken ties with a few who can't get me off their mailing lists. If we allow that unlimited access to my phone telephone (a service that I pay for) they will not stop. Why can't I decide who can use my phone and who can't? Thank you for your time. Please deny them this additional access to my life.
